

A Level English Language

Explore your relationship with English language; evaluate and critique the language of those around you!

Why choose this subject?

If you enjoy questioning how and why people communicate, English Language is for you. You'll develop critical thinking skills that help you question information, spot bias and understand how language can influence people – skills that are increasingly valuable in a world where AI can generate information instantly! You'll build on your GCSE skills while exploring language, society and identity.

What will I study?

How does language give people power or take it away? Why do we speak differently depending on who we are talking to? How do advertisers use words and images to persuade us? You'll explore how language changes across different people, places and situations, from social media and everyday conversations to advertising and the media. You'll investigate an area of language that interests you and create your own creative writing piece.

Where can this subject take me?

This course could lead to exciting careers in journalism, marketing, teaching, speech therapy, child care, media and even politics.
